A Step Ahead—Together

The Mayor of Saanich and the Mayor-elect of Victoria have lost no time in assuring each other, and the public in general, that they look forward to a period of close co-operation between their respective municipal governments. If this is more than flush-of-victory op: timism - and there is every reason to believe that it is genuine then a good forward step will have been taken in Greater Victoria's administration.

The last two years have been marred by superficial squabbles between the mayors of Victoria and Saanich, even while talk of eventual amalgamation of the two largest municipalities was revived. If a friendly liaison can be established between Mayor Curtis and Mayor Pollen, they may set the pace for mutually beneficial developments.

Both men have demonstrated an ability to think in terms of the whole community rather than merely its arbitrary compartments. Certainly the people, many of whom live in Saanich and work in Victoria, have a trans-border view of the situation.

Whether or not closer relations might lead to amalgamation is not a pressing question at the moment. The regionalization of the whole area is taking care of some of the common problems - hospital construction, sewerage, parks, planning — and helping to relieve the pressure of handicaps arising from the arbitrary political hodge-podge which history has bequeathed us.

tages to be gained from the close relationship between public and government which relatively small political entities make possible. But there are equally obvious benefits deriving from the removal of duplication in services, the equalization of taxes in adjacent neighborhoods, and other features. The best of both systems may yet be achieved.

Certainly it is pointless for neighboring municipalities to maintain anything less than cooperative friendliness. The rivalries and antagonisms rarely extend beyond the respective council chambers, in any case. In re-establishing better relations, the two local governments will only be doing what their constituents al-

Not to Be Taken for Granted

True, there are definite advan

While Prime Minister Trudeau was still in Washington a high U.S. Treasury official was testifying on U.S. - Canadian relations on a note not in tune with Mr. Trudeau's high optimism. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John Petty spoke before the House of Representatives subcommittee on foreign economic relations. He has been involved in the application of the Nixon economic measures to this country and is generally conidered a "hard liner."

The Treasury official introduced an old concept into the debate on economic relations between Canada and the U.S. by describing the object of American policy as "reciprocity." He said reciprocity meant the elimination of unequal barriers between the two countries and, at least in his testimony, stressed U.S. economic complaints against Canada: for instance, the auto pact safeguards, and Canada's tourist allowance being smaller than that of the United States. He recognized that we have complaints, too, and made it clear that "neither country can profit at the expense of the other."

Traditionally, "reciprocity" between the two countries has referred to free trade in natural products and a reduced tariff on certain manufactured goods. The concept has had a chequered and stormy career in our history sometimes popularly supported, sometimes not. Mr. Petty indicated that reciprocity did not necessarily mean a trade balance between the two countries.

By introducing a ghost from the past, Mr. Petty has seemingly contradicted or at least complicated Mr. Nixon's assurance that the United States would respect our identity and destiny. For, in so many words, reciprocity has meant freer trade with the U.S., and Ottawa would probably balk at such an objective unless there were very stringent safeguards.

Random Bullets

To people in this part of the world, the duel of honor between two Uruguayan generals defeated country carries all the implications of comic opera. The principals took their places, 25 paces apart, fired and missed. They changed places, fired and missed again. Honor was satisfied and they went home.

Comic it may sound, but it isn't. With shooting like that, far too great a danger is created for any innocent bystander.

MAURICE WESTERN

Reassurance in the Answers

rather breathless comments at a Washington news conference and his more restrained report to the House of Commons on the talks with Mr. Nixon have been greeted with some derision by critics inside and outside Parliament.

Faced with such questions as those framed by Mr. Trudeau, what other responses could possibly have been expected from an American president?

But, while the "fantastically new statement" may not be fantastically important, it is possibly of very considerable significance that Mr. Trudeau felt a compulsion to pose the questions. It may, for rather different reasons, be significant that he came away from the meeting genuinely reassured by Mr. Nixon's answers, even though he had nothing to show by way of tangible gains

Most Unusual Minister

Mr. Trudeau, as he has frequently demonstrated, is a most unusual prime minister: He is distinguished, it seems to me, by certain logical habits of mind which set him apart from any of his predecessors. He appears to prefer a sort of clean slate approach to problems one which takes nothing for granted. Thus we began with a public debate on foreign policy leading to an extraordipary white paper; extraordinary because it was thought necessary to begin with a tabula rasa on which was afterwards written such basic questions as, why have a foreign policy? What in the broadest sense are our national aims? Should external activities be directly related to While this curiously academic exer cise was in progress, NATO was in crisis and Europe, following the Soviet occupation of Prague, desperately attempting with no very clear indication of how much importance he attached to them and sometimes, as a labor leader lately observed, of playing a devil's advocate role in various discussions

The point is that Mr. Trudeau (and r. Sharp) have for some time beer hinting at a possible and very gloomy in terpretation of American policies. This is that the U.S. administration might be deliberately attempting to impose a permanent trade deficit on this country to further an aim of buying up resources and enterprise and turning Canada into an from the prime minister's various statements to judge how seriously he took this Marxist-type hypothesis.

Evidently Mr. Trudeau was very serious; the suspicion in his mind deepseated. It may have been there for a long time. It would, for example, help to explain, his controversial statements in the Soviet Union — long before the Nixon measures — about the "overpowering presence" and the consequent "danger to our national identity from a cultural, economic and perhaps even military point of view.

The idea of a Washington meeting was not Mr. Trudeau's; it was Robert Stanfield's. But the nature of the conversations, as reported by the prime minister, perplexed Mr. Stanfield and many other people. This may have been because Mr. Trudeau, with such a burden on his mind, was seeking reassurance which another political leader would not have regarded as particularly relevant in the circumstances.

Much Impressed

In any case, the prime minister met Mr. Nixon and was much impressed. This is not surprising; the popular notion of the U.S. president does not accord at all with what one hears of him from diplomats — including some from countries very critical of American foreign policies. Mr. Trudeau obtained more than the reassurance he sought; he also convinced himself that he had been wrong in an earlier view that the U.S. government neither knows nor cares what is happening to Canada as a result of its pressed the result of the recent election in that famous Himalayan state, the Kingdom of Nostalgia. But from usually unreliable sources I have reconstructed the extraordinary events that led to the suicide of the government according to an ancient Nostalgian custom known, in the native language, as "closure."

King Lumbago, even at the age of 97, was the first man to foresee this tragic nce copy of the Speech from the prone, written by his prime minis Fragile Ali.

The Speech looked like a routine preelection document, with all the regular promises and bloated rhetoric, but, on second thought, the king warned the prime minister that the government was going a little too far this time.

So It Must Be

"Very well," the king agreed, with some refuctance. "But in the second paragraph you promise full employment when the Economic Council reported only yesterday, that high unemploymen was inevitable for years to come. So it must be so long as we keep raising our production costs. And then you have the, nerve to promise Price Stability. Why deceive the people?"

"Oh, they won't be deceived in the least," Fragile All replied. That sort of promise has been repeated so often that people have built up an immunity to it, like insects with insecticides. In fact, hey clamor for it every year and I can't disappoint them."

All right, then, if you insist. But look at the third promise of Guaranteed Regional Equality. How do you propose to-equalize the incomes of the people living in the fertile valleys and those on the barren peaks of the Himalayas? It's physically and mathematicaly absurd, and

When the Speech from the Throne was read in Parliament a strange thing happened. The newly appointed leader of the opposition, an obscure peasant from the mountains named Whimsical Khan, shocked the whole nation down to its sandals by announcing an almost unbelievable policy.

"I make no promises," said Whimsical Khan. "I know little of politics. But perhaps I know a little about the human situation and it's not like the Speech. I even have the queer notion that the people are about ready to hear the obvious facts. And the first fact is that the Kingdom, of Nostalgia finds itself in deep no matter what the government or anyone else may say.

"In short," Whimsical Khan concluded, "this nation must sober up after a long debauch and save itself from itself, its only enemy. That won't be easy, but let us begin. And having told you the truth for once, I assume my party will be defeated at the polls."

This amazing confession brought elege, which was established in a block of laughter in the treasury benches and gloom among the opposition members As the prime minister remarked to his ty for a parking lot. colleagues, "the poor guy has blown in the Mistoric Savannah Foun-for sure. Limited Debate

So the government enforced the rules of procedure, limited debate on a tax law unintelligible to its authors, denied that this was closure and called an immediate election

Since the outcome was not in doubt, the prime minister made no speeches and contented himself with a few casual interviews on the street corners. Whimsical Khan made the same boring speech every night. He said merely that he could promise nothing but would do his best under exceedingly difficult circumstances and if the people wanted painless olutions they had better elect someone else. Then he would happily return to his mountain hermitage.

- Until election night his return seemed certain. For, as the prime minister said privately, who would vote for such a dull, unpromising fellow? Who would break the nation's sacred tradition and vote against the old Nostalgian Dream?

Nevertheless, they did. Their votes poured out of the Himalayas like an avalanche, buried the government and installed Whimsical Khan in office. And when, as custom required, Fragile Ali applied final closure to his own public career and leaped from the tower of the Parliament Buildings, King Lumbago attended the state funeral in person and said he felt quite sad.

LONDON - The Anti-Suffragettes have been roused to action by the recent violent demonstrations of the suffra-gettes. The object was to secure the prime minister's co-operation in blocking the threatened enfranchisement of women by means of an amendment to the government's forthcoming franchise reform, which includes the granting of votes to

I'm not going to give you the whole thing (which, incidentally, is called Benswanger's Omnibus Report: How to be Wealthy-Though Independent), but just excerpts. His main theme is set out in a chapter called The Automobile as a Tool of Economic and Social Policy:

Policy:

1. This program envisages the creation of two new public bodies to be known as the Canadian Vehicle Interment Corp (Canvic), and the Saskatchewan Mountain Authority.

2. At the time of delivery of any new motor vehicle, the manufacturer thereof shall pay to Canvic the sum of $100, half of which may be recoverable from the purchaser.

Glere Benswanger inserts a note to say that three henefits already will have been achieved. The automobile industry — and employment in it — will have been stimulated. The Government will have been put in possession of a sizeable amount of money, interest-free, to use for a period of eight years. And a severe source of ecological damage (old cars with faulty rings) will have been

If they res-sult in heavy rainfalls, he points out, farmers may convert to growing flax and a cottage industry may develop in producing linen ta-bleclotts for the world market. On the other hand, if the province should, become a desert, there will always be the possibility of raising-camels for camel-hair costs. Such adjustments as may be necessary, he says, will be more than compensated for by the new jobs that will be created in mountain-building, and in the pleasure which future companions.

Mullin Elected By Pulp Workers

VANCOUVER — Fred Mullin of Crofton, a pulp mill pipefitter, has been elected president of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.

Paper Workers of Canada.

He defeated Stan Shewaga of Nanaimo 1,921 to 1,737. The result was announced Monday.

Shewaga had spearheaded the union's unsuccessful raids on the International Woodworkers of America, International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and United Steelworkers of America.

Mullin said in an interview that "organizing outside the pulp and paper industry will be arrived at only after it has first been presented to the membership for approval."

He said this is in line with a decision of the union's convention last fall at Fairmont Hot Springs.

In other election results, Reg Ginn of Woodfibre was elected second vice-president and Sharon Lambert of Vancouver was returned as secretary-treasurer. Earlier, Jim Sloan of Castlegar was elected first vice-president without opposition.

Political activist Charles Political activist Charles Gagnon said that Vallieres' decision to "put himself on the bourgeois side" must nave arisen from "personal rather than political reasons." He said it showed "an extraordinary ideological confusion."

After the party, you could sleep at our place.

And that's

Let's be optimistic and assume you don't have an accident. Or hit any parked cars. Or speed. Let's assume you stay at the party longer than you planned and had three or " fourdrinks-enough to drink to make you legally impaired. All in good fellowship. All without malice. And for some reason, you are stopped.

Here's what to expect

1 Breathalizer Police officers are extremely adept at spotting impaired drivers. There are dozens of telltale clues. If you are suspected, you will be asked to submit to a breathalizer test. This is mandatory and refusal can result in serious charges. If you have consumed enough to give you a .08 reading, you can be charged with impaired driving.

2 Jail Very likely, you will be jailed overnight. For the average citizen, this is a terrifying experience. Impaired driving comes under the Criminal Code, and that is just how you will be treated. You will be finderprinted, asked for alias', relieved of your belt, tie, shoelaces, and personal possessions, allowed one phone call, and be placed in a cell. In the morning, your breakfast will be slid under the bars of the cell door: You will find the night harrowing and have plenty of time to reflect. In the meantime, your wife and children will be worried, distressed and slightly mortified.

3 Fines The arresting officer's report, corroborated by your breathalizer reading, will normally result in a conviction. The number of convictions is increasing every year. Over 12,000 are expected in British Columbia alone during 1971. If the Judge lets you off with a $250 fine for the first offence, you can consider yourself lucky. For having accumulated ten penalty points, the Superintendent of Motor Vehicles will assess you a charge of $25.00 which will be used to pay for public information messages like the one you are now reading. Add to this the $50 to several hundred dollars you'll spend on a lawyer and you've dropped quite a 4 Suspension Even if you have never had so much as a parking ticket in thirty years of driving, you can expect to have your right to drive reviewed by the Superintendent of Motor-Vehicles. On his judgement and your driving record, your suspension may be one month, three months, six months, or even indefinitely.

5 Insurance The costs don't stop at fines and lawyers. When your insurance company hears all about it, your insurance premium will be surcharged. That means your insurance rates will soar until you can prove yourself a good risk again. That could take years if you have no moreproblems. And here's another point to ponder. Had you injured or killed someone while impaired, your liability coverage was void anyhow. Your insurance company will pay the claim, but they may demand repayment from you.

6 Publicity Criminal courts swarmwith court reporters. In some smaller communities, your conviction will make front page news. They will list the details of your arrest, trial, conviction, breathalizer reading, fine and suspension. They will print all this, along with your name and address, for all your friends and business associates to read. It is the coup de grace you can expect about one week

These are the hard cold facts of how a jovial evening can turn into a nightmare. The police have seen too many dead children to have much patience. The courts have heard too many tragedies to give you much mercy. And that's the way it is.

If you drink, don't drive

So you see fellows what phonetics can do with a typo?
And my, won't Coleman be surprised!
But see one "typo" and you haven't seem "em all. Oh. no.
It was a few years ago, and the story concerned a female skier who had been missing overnight on Mt. Rainier.
You guessed it. The published item read: "She spent the night on Mr. Rainier."
And that, friends, is just another way in which the computer readiles.

Hockey and Education Don't Mix

Then there was slightly disturbing item out of Vancouver

Then there was slightly disturbing item out of Vancouver. Tom Fisher, executive secretary of the Western Canada Junior Hockey League; as much as said hockey and education don't mix. Matter of fact he did say it.

"Not many hockey players are good students," is the way Fisher put it, adding the rather significant statement: "It's almost impossible to go to school and play hockey."

There just isn't time for both, because junior hockey is a business. Which it is, granted, for as Fisher added: "The purpose of the WCJHL is to put players into the NHL, to provide the pros with a base of young players, and to give players an opportunity to learn their chosen profession."

The key words are "chosen profession," and that is exactly what the youngsters are getting paid for — to play hockey. And that does not include schooling.

"What they are is young professionals," Fisher said, and

"What they are is young professionals," Fisher said, and if it naturally follows that all the players are aware of that fact of life, then it is up to them, and them alone, to decide whether to opt for hockey or school or both.

In short, it is strictly up to the players.

Still, there is the haunting thought that the league could perhaps do more in explaining the many benefits that could come with an education of even set up a program whereher.

come with an education, or even set up a program whereby

If would serve the purpose of junior hockey much better because it is obvious that not all junior players will make it to the NHL, or even the minor leagues.

Actually, the NHL recently instituted a program whereby players can get assistance from the league in cominuing their studies, and it was outlined to members of the Los. Angeles Kings when they trained here this fall.

Junior hockey could follow suit. Or maybe it aiready has.

Let's hore so.

You Have to Own the Four-Foot'

But to more pleasant times. It was on the tube last week that Keith Dagg proclaimed that to be successful in curling, "you have to own the four-foot." All else matters little if you can't draw the pot. Dagg didn't take credit for originating can't draw the pot. Dagg didn't take credit for originating that philosophy. He gave as his authority a guy who always has "owned the four-foot." Frank Avery.

Recently elected to the B.C. Sports Hall of Fame, Avery was Keith's teacher. And proof that Keith learned his lesson well came again this weekend when he qualified his rink for the Island mixed curling finals. And it was an oddity in the playdowns that not one Duncan rink made it to the finals. Rising up as new and worthy challengers on the scene were rinks skipped by Harvey Thomson, Lyle Garraway and Don Matheson. They should give a good account.

I wasn't too sure, either, when Art Stot sidled up to the desk and said: "I see where the government has given out

There's a vacancy at one of Carada's most prestigious golf courses, but only a few B.C.-stationed professionals are rushing forward to break down the door into Marine Drive at Vancouver.

Drive at Vancouver.

Marine Drive took a slap in the face when Ron Willey tendered his resignation for the "chance" to move over to the poorer and public University course. There is greater interest from afar, but local pros, aware of what appears to be an intense membership interference, have displayed a reluctance to file applications.

It's Marine Drive's problem.

But also in Vancouver, the PGA branch of B.C. is more concerned over a "price war" brewing between pros. concerned over a "price war" brewing between pros. concerned.

The first flood of entries hit Leo Derman on Monday, with applications from 87 men and 27 women in the first batck of mail. The field is expected to be limited to about 110 men and 30 women.

Colwood members, at their annual meeting, have approved an assessment that will enable the club to start on "phase one" of an expansion program on the clubhouse. The first step will provide an extension to the men's locker room and 19th hole.

Members also approved an $8-a-year increase in dues for men, women and intermediates.

SCORES 300 GOALS

By becoming the 16th player in NHL history to score 300 goals, Esposito accomplished the feat in the second-fewest games, 564. Only Maurice (Rocket) Richard, the former great right winger with Montreal Canadiens, bettered the mark by scoring his 300th goal in his 481st game.

Here is a comparison of some of the other players with 300 or more goals: Nels Stewart, Montreal, Maroons, Stewart, Montreal Maroons, Boston, New York Americans, 566 games; Bobby Hull, Chi-cago Black Hawks, 576th game; Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, Montreal and New York, 593rd game; Jean Beliveau, Montreal, 594th game; Gordie Howe, Detroit Red Wings, 624th game.

It also is important to learn for passing the puck to a teammate when the opposition places their stick on the ice between you and the player you want to reach with a pass.

Make sure the puck is on the toe of the stick blade and keep your head up, with your eyes straight ahead. Practice lifting the puck up a few feet in the air and landing on a target area. This is what you will need to do when the goalle is sprawled on the ice. A small flip shot means a goal.

After completing the shot, your stick should be about two feet off the ice.

To help develop this shot, place a stick or other object on the ice. Then stand back about six feet and practice flipping the puck over the stick. Keep at it until you can do it every time.

make-work project funded by the federal government will have 12 local unemployed teachers working with students who consider themselves alienated from the public school system.

A grant of $38,600 has been provided for the project, Victoria MP David Groos said today.

The question came up Monday night at the meeting of the education committee of the Greater Victoria school board. Special education sulined the steps leading up to the project being approved. 103 HERE

The Family and Children's Service and special coun-sellors with District No. 61 had compiled lists of the children they knew who for various reasons were not at-tending school. The combined total came to 103 in the area.

The teachers involved in the Manpower project will work with these children, either visiting them in their homes or al centres.

Dr. John Wiens, director of instruction for the school disrict, said the intentions of the teachers running the project sound good and that they will have an added advantage by not being bound by restrictions of a formal school sys-

Basford Clarifies Just What Is in a Name

OTTAWA (CP) — Regulations against misrepresentation in textile labelling and advertising under the Textile-Labelling Act became effective Monday, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford announced.

But main features of the act, aimed at giving some relief to consumers confused by the skien of trade names that have cropped up for increasing number of fibres in recent years, do not come into effect until Dec. 1, 1972.

These regulations will require the listing of fibre content textiles. The time lag is to give manufacturers time to change their present labels.

Generic Names to Go

-In the case of man-made fibres, this will mean the use of small number of generic names in place of hundreds of trade names now in use.

Mr. Basford told a news conference the regulations are needed because of the recent development of a tremendous number of textiles. Some 800 different trade names had appeared on the market, confusing consumers and dry cleaners.

. Under the new regulations, manufacturers could still use the trade name if they wanted, but they would have to list the fibres present in amounts of five per cent of the textile or more according to 18 selected generic names.

About a half dozen of these names—such as nylon and rayon — were commonly used in the marketplace and already familiar to the general public.

he applies to the consumer affairs department for one registered for his exclusive use.

Labels providing this information must be in both English and French attached to the product or be clearly visible to the consumer at the time of purchase.

The country of origin of imported textile products must be shown if the Canadian dealer states the product is imported.

Mr. Basford said the shirt he wore, for instance, stated it was made in England and of imported fabric. But he suspected that the fabric itself was not from England.

Apply to Many Goods

He said the new labelling requirements would apply generally to men's and women's wear, drapery products, camping equipment, sporting goods and yard goods and wigs.

Mr. Basford said he is also urging manufacturers to use the department's system of voluntary care labelling of fabrics.

He said the department has had a good deal of co-opera-tion from industry in the development of a set of care change in their labels anyway, "we hope they will adopt the full process of care labelling of products."

The care labelling system is a set of five basic symbols: A washtub for washing, a triangle for bleaching, a square for drying, a hand iron for ironing and a circle for dry cleaning.

Traffic signal colors are used to show the degree of cau-tion needed. For instance a red iron means "do not iron" and an amber iron means "iron with care" or at a temperature listed on the iron symbol.

Admits Legal Barriers

Mr. Basford said he wishes the care labelling system were mandatory also, but there are both constitutional and technical barriers.

The Textile Labelling Act was given royal assent March 25, 1970 with the provision that it should come into force on a day to be fixed by proclamation.

It provides authority for enforcing the new regulations and penalties for conviction for offences under it.

Mr. Basford said enforcement will occur in two ways Through his department's consumer regional offices working with inspectors and through the private sector itself-including consumer groups and business competitors.

Dealers violating sections of the act relating to false or misleading advertising are liable on summary conviction to a maximum fine of $5,000 or on conviction on indictment to a maximum fine of $10,000.

Program Eases Mentally III Back Into Society

By HELEN MELNYK Times Staff

The day a patient is discharged from a psychiatric institution, he is left to fend for himself.

This may mean having to find a job and a place to live. In many cases, his family has broken up . . . if there was one to begin with.

All these pressures put a heavy strain on a person for whom it may be too much to sit in a room where there are other people, or for whom interest in life has fizzled

About three years ago John Watson found himself in this position. His family had left. He had nowhere to go and no work to do. Though the Salvation Army took him in, this was a blow to his pride; he had always paid his way before. Unable to co-ordinate his hands and mind, he way before. Unable to co-ordinate his hands and mind, he found work impossible.

Today, he's well enough to hold down a job as a taxi driver and have a social life as well.

John Watson is one of the people aided by the rehabilitation program run by the Canadian Mental Health Association. The program prepares the mentally ill to enter-community life by helping them regain the social and working skills often lost in institutional life.

"In a hospital, everything is organized and regulated," said Mrs., Joan Dumka, executive director of the Victoria branch of CMHA. "So when a mentally ill person leaves, something to do. Many live alone in housekeeping rooms or boarding houses. Waking up in the morning with a day stretching ahead and nothing to do, doesn't help recovery."

"To, get better, the person has to get up and out. Having something specific to do each day will motivate him to get out of bed in the morning."

Skills, Money Acquired

The CMHA program offers a wide range of activities ranging from handicrafts and social get-togethers, to workshops where work skills and a little money can be picked up. The people who attend are from 18 to 78 years of age, and of every educational and economic level.

The handicrafts program is geared for those who do not have to worry about getting a job, said Mrs. Dumka, These are mostly older, married women. Art, embroidery, macrame and other classes are offered.

"These women need some kinds of interest and activities to enrich their lives," said Mrs. Dumka. "The handicrafts classes give them a reason for coming to the CMHA centre. You can't just have a big group of people sitting around doing nothing. They also teach the women creative things to do at home."

Mrs. Dumka said that working with the hands and completing something gives many people a great feeling of woodworking workshop, sewing machines, and weaving looms. A group of clients package candies into boxes for a local department store. Several others are cutting and wrapping holly, sent out east for sale. All are paid for the work they do. The association runs a store, the Village Fair where members sell what they have made.

Some of the workers work a regular time-table. They punch in at 9 every morning and put in 5 or 6 hours. This is to accustom and discipline them for outside jobs. But this is done only on the recommendation of a client's doctor, Mrs. Dumka said.

doctor, Mrs. Dumka said.

The social aspect of the program is very important, she said. "No one puts anyone else down. Each member knows that all the others have problems, too. Gradually each learns to relax and build up a circle of friends."

Before a person who has been mentally ill can go out and apply for a job, he has to build up self-confidence and be able to get along with others, said Mrs. Dumka.

Volunteer aid runs the program, Mrs. Dumka explained.

"The personal interest the volunteers show renews the client's confidence in humanity; many have had poor experiences with people."

Clients are encouraged to integrate into the community, she said. For instance, a person taking art classes at the centre may be guided to other classes offered elsewhere in the city. Those in the work projects, are referred to Manpower when they are ready to take on jobs. Some clients expand their work projects at the centre into a means of earning a livelihood. Like the three aspiring candle-makers who recently moved from the basement of the centre into, a business location.

The road-to recovery is often slow and hard.

"The fact that a person gets here is something," Mrs. Dumka said. "If he has enough initiative to do that, then he can go on doing other things. Many people can only stay 10 minutes the first couple of times they come. One young man would come in and out five times during the day, staying only 10 minutes each time. Now he remains for the whole morning. He doesn't socialize much, but that'll take some more time.

Wants It Kept Secret

"Newcomers can barely sit in the room at tea. When they are up making tea and serving tea—that's progress!" The community does not know very much about mental illness because the patient wants to keep his complaint

People who have suffered from heart, lung or other physical ailments will readily talk about their recovery, she said. But mum's the word for the person whose illness was

"There's still a stigma attached," she concluded.

Smokers Warned 7

OTTAWA (CP) - As many from lung disease in 10 or 20 years unless women cut down on cigarette smoking, a group of Ottawa-area doctors con-cluded this weekend.

The physicians, meeting for an "education day," discussed tuberculosis, lung cancer, asthma, emphysema, bronchitis and pneumonia. Smoking, they decided, is easily the greatest cause of respiratory allments.

And because men are apparently more easily convinced of the dangers of smoking than women, plus the fact that more women are smoking now than a genera-tion ago, the doctors predicted trouble ahead for women.

Dr. Colin Woolf of Toronto told the meeting that the nonsmoking majority of the population should demand that smoking areas be eliminated from theatres and public buildings. More than 60 per cent of the population does not smoke, and that majority has the right to breathe un-polluted air, he said.

When Snow Comes Down

Mother Should Be Ready

I would rather romp barefoot through a stack of broker

I would rather romp barefoot through a stack of broken beer bottles than go out and flounder around in a pile of snow. Children however, seem to feel some special magic in getting their feet frozen and absolutely demand to go out when the first flake hits the sidewalk.

Locating a snowsuit is not too difficult. It is in the basement in the box marked kitchen curtains. Getting him into the snowsuit is only a bit more complicated than plucking your eyebrows with a pair of pliers. It takes a steady hand and an infinite amount of patience, but it isn't impossible.

Mittens are no problem if your child has two left hands. While mittens are purchased in pairs, right hand mittens are designed to self destruct in two days, leaving you with boxes full of left hands, you will have to resort to turning one mitten inside out. Of course, the reindeer will be on the inside, and all the fuzzy knots will be on the outside, but they didn't match anyway, and at least the thumb will be in the right place.

Don't bother looking in the coat closet for boots. Boots hate coat closets. They much prefer hanging around in linen closets or vegetable bins and tend-to-wander off to these fa-closets or segetable bins and tend-to-wander off to these favorite haunts by themselves.

Finding the boots is only half the battle. The sturdy little fellow who just last week kicked the storm door off its hinges suddenly develops "jelly leg," a malady which reduces the femur to putty. When mother, attempts to get him into the boots, his leg accordion-pleats itself right up to the thigh.

All through this grim process, he is happily chanting, "Gonna make a snowman, an' a snow lady, an' a fort, an' a castle, an' a igloo, an' a . . ." After what seems like an hour, but is in reality only 54 minutes, he is out the door.

All would be well if, five minutes later, the air wasn't rent with the cry that strikes desperation the heart of any mother, "Mommy, I gotta go potty."

"Many had long braids and the huskiest voice I've ever heard on a child — it was in-credible. She had amazing en-thusiasm and her favorite ex-pression was 'Oh, how beauti-ful.'"

"Every little thing she saw was beautiful to her." Mrs. Blades said she was appalled at the books provided for the children. They were of such poor quality she felt she could do better so she started to work on one of her own.

TORONTO (CP) - About 400 poor families in Toronto's east end will receive cash gifts this year instead of Christmas hampers.

Families participating in a scheme sponsored by a com-munity, centre and five churches are filling out income declaration forms and if they qualify, will receive family size.

Jeanne Fay, co-ordinator of the project said Monday the organization, asks no personal questions and persons who apply for grants are "treated

A pamphlet about the project says it s designed to "at-tack the underlying cause of need at Christmas — inadequate income."

The project also is designed to provide employment for some people on welfare who will assist families in filling out application forms.

Mrs. Fay said 274 familes have applied since Dec. 1, all with incomes between $50 and $150 a month below the Statistics Canada poverty line of $4,650 a year for a family of

After cashing the board's ace and king of diamonds, declarer entered his own hand via the heart king. The rest of the tricks belonged to him, since he had nothing left in his hand except the heart ace, and the K-J of spades.

This then was the square.

This, then, was the squeeze and the defenders couldn't have done a thing about it.

Quebec To Control Mergers

QUEBEC (CP) - A bill giv-

QUEBEC (CP) — A bill giving the provincial government power to impose municipal mergers was adopted in the Quebec national assembly Monday night.

The legislation, designed to reduce the province's 1,585 municipalities by half, also provides for per capita grants as high as $15 for municipalities that agree to amalgamate.

The bill passed second read-

The bill passed second reading, clause-by-clause study and third reading, after an opposition motion to send it back to committee for further study was defeated 43 to 21.

Government policy has favored such amalgamations since the early 1960s but the legislation adopted Monday night is the first giving the government power to impose mergers on municipalities.

The government will be able to designate zones in which it can order municipalities to undertake merger studies.

dies.

The municipalities will then have a year to hold referendums, study the proposed mergers and report to the minister.

If municipalities refuse to merger despite favorable studies, the minister will be able to impose a merger within the

It may well be that in some cases a good vaccine—in the form of a "flu shot"—will protect a person against influenza, but in many cases it is impossible to tell whether the drug worked or it did not. Why? The problem is that there are many viruses causing the various symptoms that we call flu, and a vaccine can only work against the one virus it was designed

A person may have a flu shot, and thereby be protected against a virus he doesn't meet up with, but he still will not be protected against any of a number of other viruses that are capable of giving him a few days of misery with flu symptoms.

Some types of influenza virus make symptoms so curious that it is hard to tell if they are true influenzas. The person may simply feel very fatigued, or he may have a backache or some diarrhea and vomiting for 24 hours, and about the only way I can tell if the trouble is due to a flu virus is to call a family doctor friend who sees many patients with acute illnesses, and ask him if he has been seeing many cases of the type of distress I have just seen.

One of the strangest medical experiences I ever had in my

One of the strawest medical experiences I ever had in my life was during the epidemic of so-called Hong Kong flu, a few years ago. I happened to be in California, where many people were reportedly ill with a strange type of influenza. Several times during the night I woke with a very curious form of violent vomiting of gas such as I had never seen or heard of before. The next day I was so tired that I remained in bed until about four in the afternoon, but then I felt perfectly well, and so I got up and took a plane for home. By the second day after my experience I was back hard at work in my office. after my experience I was back hard at work in my office.

Is there anything a person can do to protect himself from the misery of the flu? I think it is a good idea not to yisit a crowded into a room together. There the air will probably become filled with a number of viruses. It is worth noting also that a good way to get a spell of flu is to go on a journey and thus meet some new viruses to which one's body is not immune.

It is sometimes a kind thing for a person with flu to stay home so as not to pass the virus on to other persons in his office. However, one difficulty is that sometimes by the time he actually becomes miserable with symptoms, he has been carrying the virus and has already exposed his fellow workers to it.

Many people feel that they should go to bed with the flu. I do that only if I have a fever and feel weak. We hear over the radio and television that it is a good idea to drink much fluid, but I know of no reason for doing this.

fluid, but I know of no reason for doing this.

Many people go to a doctor and get a "shot" of penicillin, but experts tell me that penicillin does not work against a virus, only against a germ, and so I have never taken penicillin for a cold or an influenza.

My good friend Dr. Harold Diehl, when at a great university where he was responsible for the health of some 30,000 students, tried out many medicines on those with colds and flu. The only medicine that did any good was a derivative of optime, such as Copavín (a capsule containing codeine and papaverine). It has been known for more than a hundred years that "optim eaters" never have a cold. Fortunately, codeine is almost never habit-forming. In my 66 years of practice I have never seen laryone addicted to it. The important thing is to take a capsule or two of Copavin immediately, as soon as there is any sign of the flu or a cold. Since I have been using Copavin, I have had no colds.

For Military Mink

The national defence department ordered 3,000 mink hats for women serving in the Canadian armed forces Monday.

Climate Too Warm

Few of them are expected to be worn here

Lt.-Cmdr. Dorothy Gower, executive assistant to the base commander of CFB Esquimalt, says the newly-designed hat will get little use here because the moderate west coast climate calls for the use of the regular felt hat which can be covered with plastic in rainy weather.

The mink hat, she says, is an alternative one which will be greatly appreciated by personnel stationed where the winters are severe.

B.C. 'NOT PUSHING' PARK AT CAPE SCOTT

By PETER MeNELLY (Second of a Series)

The provincial government has no immediate plans to create a park at Cape Scott on Vancouver Island.

In a recent interview, Recreation and Conservation Min-ister -Ken Kiernan outlined provincial policy toward a Cape Scott park:

We're not pushing it," he said.

The area involved is at the north end of Vancouver Island. A B.C. parks branch report in February 1968 recommended about 29,000 acres of land in the area be set aside as a Class A park.

Hopes for a park there were heightened in September 1968 when Kiernan announced the government had acquired 576 acres in the area, in an expectation of the process of the reserve, for the area contains rock formations high in copper, part of a system running from Rupert Inlet.

The September and October figures cover the first full month of the new U.S. 10-percent extra duty on imports. But the government has warned that the impact will become heavier as the months go by and could become serious late this winter if they are not lifted soon.

The problem is that such a large proportion of our exports go to the U.S. — a case of too many exports in one basket. The cry is being heard for diversification of Trade Minister Lean-Luc Pepin told the export associa-tion at its annual meeting in October that trade and in-dustry must become more di-versified "to decrease the degree of vulnerability of their economy."

But any such diversification

But any such diversification must be a long-range program and the exporters see many problems ahead.
G. A. E. Couture, association chairman, predicted that the U.S. moves and other developments "may cause a serious distortion, if not complete disruption, of trade for exporters," and "there seems

Climate Too Warm For Military Mink

The national defence department ordered 3,000 mink hats for women serving in the Canadian armed forces Monday.

Few of them are expected to be worn here.

Lt.-Cmdr. Dorothy Gower, executive assistant to the base commander of CFB Esquimalt, says the newly-designed hat will get little use here because the moderate west coast climate calls for the use of the regular felt hat which can be covered with plastic in rainy weather.

The mink hat, she says, is an alternative one which will be greatly appreciated by personnel stationed where the winters are severe.

Each hat will cost $15.34. The hats are made of mink tails dyed black and topped with a fuzzy fur bauble.

Total cost of the order was $92,040. There are 1,100 comen in the armed forces, 58 of them stationed at Esqui-

A parks department proposal to make the alpine meadows on the summit of the mountain into a Class A park was rejected by the government even though it would not have interfered with the ski project as the latter is well-below the timberline.

The parks proposal was supported by park experts, fishermen, hunters, conservationists and naturalists in all parts of the province.

Warren said nowhere in the Okennen Vallen is them.

Warren said nowhere in the Okanagan Valley is there an undamaged alpine mountain top except Brent Mountain.

"All other mountain tops — White, Terrace, Apex and Silevr Star, Big White, Little White, Terrace, Apex and Mount Baldy are scarred with roads, mining, ski runs or old forest burns," he pointed out.

As for the ski complex, Warren says it would be interesting to know who is financing the company.

He noted there are six other skiing areas in the Okanagan, all marginal operations. The Okanagan Similkameen

Society launched a campaign five years ago to save the peak's beautiful alpine meadows from being ruined by commercialization.

Cancels Pisces Sale

OTTAWA (CP). — The federal government has cancelled on grounds of national security an export permit it granted about a year ago for sale of a small research submarine to Russia. Bruce Howard, parliamentary secretary to Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, told reporters Tuesday the permit was cancelled Dec. 1 to the displeasure of the Russians.

The federal government has offered to buy the submersible, called Pisces IV, for some $2 million. It is made by
